It makes it easy to cut and paste content from one image to another. For example, you could copy an object from one photo to a brand new layer and then delete it. Or you could copy an object and paste it into a layer so that only this object appears in the new layer. You can also copy an object from one layer to another (and remember, you new the Object Editing tool, not the usual Copy tool). You can even choose to paste it into your original image, making a version that has extra and deleted objects. (It's possible to paste content from one document to another, but you have to specify photos.) Point and Select functions let you select content from any part of an object or image.
